

Course Management Tools

The purpose of course management tools such as Blackboard, webCT, e-College or Moodle and other similar products your campus is using, is to maintain communication and provide information for students in a distance learning environment.

Consider using the course management tools as an extension of the class and depository for other resources and information.

Suggested uses:

- Provide articles such as other research papers
- Testing
- Handouts – less cumbersome, cuts down on paper, and students have access prior to class.
- Posting of assignments or other papers from students.
- Journals

Course management tools save time – should the materials for the session not arrive at the distance site(s) in time for the session (via regular mail or fax), the students would then have access to them.

Contact your campus IVN Coordinator to find the contact on your campus for using a course management system.
